

CALEB Y. LEE

Counsel / Los Angeles

cylee@fordharrison.com / P: 213-237-2427

Caleb Lee concentrates his legal practice on the representation and counsel of management in matters related to employment law.

Caleb regularly appears in both federal and state courts, as well as before administrative agencies, where he adeptly defends employers in a wide range of employment litigation and administrative charge cases. His notable experience includes skillfully representing clients in class actions involving wage and hour claims under the California Labor Code and Fair Labor Standards Act, as well as handling background check claims under California's Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act, Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act, and the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act. Additionally, Caleb has successfully handled representative actions under the Private Attorneys General Act (PAGA).

Before joining the Los Angeles office of FordHarrison, Caleb served as Senior Corporate Counsel for a prominent international entertainment company. This in-house experience has provided him with a valuable perspective on the day-to-day employment law challenges faced by employers. Prior to his role in-house, Caleb served as a senior associate at FordHarrison, where he effectively represented and defended the firm's clients in federal and state courts in a variety of employment-related cases. This included handling single-plaintiff cases involving allegations of wage and hour violations, discrimination, harassment, retaliation, and wrongful termination. Throughout law school, he demonstrated his commitment to legal scholarship as the Notes Editor for the Hastings International and Comparative Law Review and served as the Academic Chair for the Korean American Law Student Association.
